Call for Interview Participants

Reproductive and Parenthood Journeys of People with MRKH

We are calling for participants born with MRKH or Uterine Factor Infertility (UFI), who are parents, and/or on their journey to become parents, to take part in our international study (Israel, Italy, Germany and the UK) by sharing their experiences and telling their stories. We would like to interview people on the wide range of journeys to parenthood, with a focus on uterus transplantation (UTx).

In the first phase of the project we would like to interview people with MRKH who are interested in accessing the new experimental pathways of UTx. In the following phase we intend to interview those who have become (want to become) parents through other means.

We would like to learn more about your experiences regarding becoming a parent. We are also inviting partners and uterus donors to participate and share their perspectives and experiences. Your experience and voice increases the scientific and public awareness about the meanings and issues surrounding fertility and reproductive technology for people with MRKH. The project is a qualitative collaborative study, conducted by medical sociologist Dr. Limor Meoded Danon (the PI), Gynecologist Prof. Dr. Katharina Rall (research advisor), medical anthropologist Dr. Daniela Crocetti and cultural anthropologist Dr. Marcy Brink. Your participation will include 1-2 hour interviews (face-to-face or remote). The study was approved by the Research Ethics Committee at Bar-Ilan University.

Participants can receive nominal compensation for their time. We appreciate your cooperation, time, energy and important contribution to this research project.

To schedule an interview please contact Dr. Daniela Crocetti: reproductionjourneys@gmail.com
